A marketplace led by young entrepreneurs is scheduled for Granbury on Saturday, November 21. The Granbury Children’s Business Fair is listed for 9 a.m. to noon at Sage Academy Granbury, 2400 Fall Creek Highway, with free admission.

The event organizer describes a one-day outdoor marketplace where as many as 21 entrepreneurs, ages 6 to 16, will sell. Its listing says participants develop a brand, create a product or service, and market it to customers. That gives visitors a chance to browse a range of youth-led ventures in one place, though the available information does not identify the specific sellers or what they will offer.

For families, the morning can be a way to support young people trying out the practical work behind a small enterprise: presenting an idea, offering something for sale, and engaging with customers. The fair is listed as being in its fourth year. Booth applications are closed, so the posted details describe a planned event rather than an open call for additional vendors.

The date, time and location appear on both the organizer’s Granbury event page and a separate Sage Academy page. The organizer’s listing supplies the admission and participant details. Those are the sources available for this story; the event information has not been independently confirmed. Because the fair is still in the future, readers should check the organizer or host’s pages before making the trip for any schedule or access updates.
